

From Father To His Children

There are times, My child, when you can walk hand in hand with another enjoying sweet fellowship and each other's company. The road of life you travel, you will travel together ~ that is for a ways.

There may come a time, however, when the road splits. Down one path there will be a way that seems right to you and to the ones you are walking with. But, if you will stop, turn aside and seek Me as to which road you are to take, I will tell you. The road you are currently on may be right for those you are walking with, but it will NOT be right for you. To obey Me, you will have to part company and take the opposite road your companions take. They may mock you and even try to beguile you into accompanying them, but I say, "Do not go there." If they choose to sin against you because of your obedience to Me – even in the name of love – let them go their way and you go Mine.

My road for you may only be for you. It may not be for any other. Remember, you have not chosen Me, but I have chosen and ordained you to follow Me and much of this way you will walk alone with Me. Even if the others glance back at you as you choose to take your road alone with Me; even if they become offended with you; even if they become your enemy and even if they become a mighty army, do not be afraid. Remain confident in Me. The road that I choose for you leads to My tabernacle. There you will live in My house all the days of your life. It is there that I will conceal you when trouble comes. It is there you will sing praises to My name forever. It is there you will know My peace and security. It is there that My love and My pleasures are yours. It is there you will see My goodness and My Kingdom in the land of the living. This is the road you will want to take even if you walk it all alone with Me.

Love,

Father